inches wide by sixteen inches long, it was necessary to devise a method of presentation which would incorporate as clearly as possible the succession, the marriages, and the children. In the charts which follow, the name of each Venables baron of Kinderton is preceded on the left by a number,—1, 2, 3, etc.,—and this same number in parenthesis at the right of the name distinguishes him whenever he is referred to thereafter. Children of the various marriages are paraphrased. The broken lines of the chart are indicated by the word "probably." In some cases, it has been found advisable to use brackets within Helsby's brackets, to explain a relationship, to supply a word or date, or to clarify a meaning. But such cases are few and usually obvious. Time periods have been translated from the old usage of a certain year in the reign of a sovereign into the modern usage of the year in four figures. Thus "20 William I" is 1086. Except for these interpolations,—clarifying brackets, "probably" for broken lines, the use of numbers to distinguish the Venables barons, and the modern use of the year in figures,—the Ormerod-Helsby material is quoted exactly in wording, spelling, and punctuation.

The section headed "Venables and the Venables-Vernon of Kinderton" begins with a statement of the source of these pedigrees:

The following pedigree down to the extinction of the male line is transcribed from an MS. pedigree by sir Peter Leycester, which has been collated and corrected from Inquisitions, p. m. [the Plea and Recognition Rolls,] and the Venables chartulary; the continuation was communicated by Edward Braband, esq., under the direction of Lord Vernon, [1817, and the descendants are brought down to the present time [1882] from information of the family.] The History of Cheshire, Vol. III, p. 198, 1882.

Immediately following is a description of the arms of the Venables of Kinderton. A glossary of heraldic terms used in this book is given in Appendix A.

Arms: two bars Argent. Crest: on a wreath, a wyvern Argent pierced with an arrow, headed Or and feathered Argent, devouring a child proper, crined Or, and standing on a weir Argent, banded Azure.*

Footnote:* This singular crest is emblazoned here, as exemplified in Dalton's patent to sir T. Venables 1560, of which an abstract is given in the account of Moston following. In some cases, (Har. MSS, 1535, et alibi) it is emblazoned as given in the pedigree of the Venables of Bradwall, and other differences occur in the bearings of the Venables of Agden, Vol. I, p. 409 [now 539,] and Venables of Antrobus, Ibid., p. 487, [now 658.]—H.

The arms of the Venables are more fully discussed later in this chapter. The coat of arms illustrated by Plate 2 is that which appears on page 198 of the third volume of The History of Cheshire, 1882.

There follows a description of the arms of the Venables-Vernon family (Plate 3) which will be described later, and below are large, handsome engravings of the coats of arms of the Venables of Kinderton and the Venables-Vernons side by side.

927.273 "Some Venables of Eng. & Amer."
 Ve 55 b h (1388A/32) — Henrietta B. Brown 1961

It will be noticed that above each coat of arms is a coronet showing four balls, the conventional heraldic symbol of the six-balled coronet of a baron. The Venables barons of Kinderton held the title as annexed to the land, and were not of the peerage; the Venables-Vernons were not elevated to the peerage until 1762.

Beneath the engravings begin the charts of the Venables pedigree from Gilbert de Venables (1) on pages 198-200 of the third volume of The History of Cheshire, 1882.

1. Gilbert de Venables, [alias Venator, *] supposed to be [of Venables in Normandy, and younger brother of Stephen earl of Blois, [son of Eudo earl of Blois, (according to a pedigree roll of Legh of Adlington,)] living 1086.

*See note to account of Grosvenor of Holme as to the probability of his being also ancestor of that family, as he undoubtedly was of so many others bearing various names. — H.

2. . . . de Venables, son of Gilbert de Venables (1), married

3. Gilbert de Venables, son of . . . de Venables (2), baron of Kynderton, died in the reign of king Henry the Second, 1154-1189. He married Margery, daughter of Walthew, [als. Walthoof,] son of Wolfric [lord of Hatton, in pedigree roll of Legh of Adlington.] Children of Gilbert de Venables (3) and Margery:

- a. Sir William de Venables (4).
- b. Hamon de Venables, grantee of lands in Wincham, and of his brother Michael's lands in Marston, apparently the same with Hamon, ancestor of Leigh of West-Hall.
- c. Gilbert de Venables.
- d. Michael de Venables of Marston, witness to the grants from sir William de Venables (4) to Amabil about 1156, and to his brother Hugh, 1188.
- e. R . . . de Venables, witness to the latter grant.
- f. Hugh de Venables, parson of Eccleston, Astbury, and Rosthorne.
- g. Maud de Venables, married first Ralph, son of Roger, and secondly, Hugh de Brixis. Children of Maud Venables and Ralph: Maud de Shireburne, wife of Nicholas de Elets, [or Letres]; and Emma, wife of Robert Brant.
- h. Amabil, wife of Richard de Davenport, [lord] of Davenport, to whom her brother gave the half of Merten aforesaid.

4. Sir William de Venables, son of Gilbert de Venables (3), baron of Kynderton, 1188, survived to 12 Henry 3, 1228. He married

Children of sir William de Venables (4) and . . . :

- a. Hugh de Venables (5).
- b. Robert, parson of the church of Rosthorne, obiit 44 Henry 3, 1260.
- c. . . . parent of William de la Mere. See Vol. I, 362, [now 466].
- d. William de Venables, jun. 1233. Children of William de Venables, jun. and . . . : Lettice, elder daughter and coheiress, married first, Philip de Bamvyle, secondly, Richard de Wilburham, and thirdly, Robert de Crosslegh; and Beatrix, younger daughter and coheiress, wife of Ralph Wasteney of Tyxale, 1273.
- e. Hamon, brother of William Venables the younger.

5. Hugh de Venables, son of sir William de Venables (4) and . . . , baron of Kinderton in the time of Roger, abbot of Chester, 1240-1249, married first Wentilian, whom he divorced, and secondly, Agnes, daughter of Ranulph de Oxton.

Children of Hugh de Venables (5) and Agnes:

- a. Sir Roger de Venables (6).
- b. Elizabeth, daughter of Hugh, 42 Henry 3, 1258, aunt of sir William Venables (7) 51 Henry 3, 1267.
- c. Beatrix, wife of Roger de Toft, [lord] of Toft, [circ. 51 Henry 3, 1267.]

6. Sir Roger de Venables, baron of Kinderton, son and heir of Hugh de Venables (5) 1240, died in or about 1261. He married Alice, daughter of Alan de Peninton, of Peninton-hall, co. Lancashire, about 1240.
